The Arcadia student house is located in the Caracoles district of Malabo, which is a 15 minute walk from the UNGE campus and adjacent to restaurants and local markets. Most people get around the city by foot or by taxi. Taxi service throughout Malabo costs 500 F.cfa per trip or about one US dollar. The fully furnished Spanish tiled house has seven bed rooms, a kitchen, five bathrooms, a dining area, and four communal sitting areas. There are two balconies which offer spectacular views of the ocean and surrounding area. On a clear day you can see Mt. Cameroon, the second highest mountain in Africa. The resident director also lives in the house. The house has a full time watchman, and in prior years the group has employed a maid/cook to clean, purchase food, and prepare meals. There is no computer lab in the house, but many students bring laptops from home. Currently there is no internet access from the house, but this may change shortly. Computer facilities are available at UNGE, including internet/email access. There are no phones in the house, so you will need to budget for a mobile phone (for local calls) and for long distance calling cards to make international phone calls from pay phones. There are pay phones on campus and in town. It costs about $50.00 US dollars to rent a mobile phone for the semester. This does not include the charges for making calls. Calling in and out of EG is very expensive. It’s cheaper to keep in touch with family and friends by email.
