The Queen’s University, Belfast
Housing Information

There are two housing options for students studying at the Queen’s University, Belfast: university housing or making your own independent living arrangements.

University Housing
Arcadia University houses all Queen’s students on-campus in university accommodations, with a preference for Queen’s Elm Village. Students reside in apartment-style flats with British, Irish, and other visiting students. Queen’s Elm accommodates students with individual rooms, and in most cases a connected bathroom.

Queen’s housing is self-catered; there is no meal plan available at the university. Students should anticipate preparing their own meals and shopping at markets located within walking distance. Queen’s Elm Student Centre offers a shop for smaller items, as well as a student bistro and bar.

Each flat has a shared kitchen and living area, with television and modern amenities. Self-service laundry facilities are available within the village. Pay telephones are located in every flat.

Internet access to the Queen’s network is available to students from their bedrooms in most university accommodations.

Students’ flats may be co-ed, however any individual roommate will be of the same gender. Arcadia cannot guarantee non-smoking arrangements; students with serious health concerns should notify Arcadia University during the application process.

Arcadia University will provide each student with a duvet and a pillow. Students are responsible for bed linens, duvet cover, and bath towels; because bed sizes vary in each flat and room it is recommended that students purchase their linens after they have arrived. The Arcadia Dublin staff can help students purchase linens. Students intending to bring linens should bring a single flat sheet and single duvet cover. Arcadia will also provide students with an allowance for necessary cutlery and crockery.

Queen’s Elm is located just south of Queen’s University, Belfast, off the Malone Road. Students are expected to walk to the university daily, about a 10-15 minute commute.

Housing at other Queen’s student residences are available in certain instances. Official housing allocation is handled by the Queen’s University Accommodations Office.

Independent Living Arrangements
Students may choose to make their own housing arrangements. The housing portion of the program fee will be refunded to students who arrange to live independently. Students must notify us in writing by June 30 for the fall semester and by November 20 for the spring program. The decision to make independent housing arrangements becomes final after the aforementioned dates; late requests for program housing cannot be considered.
